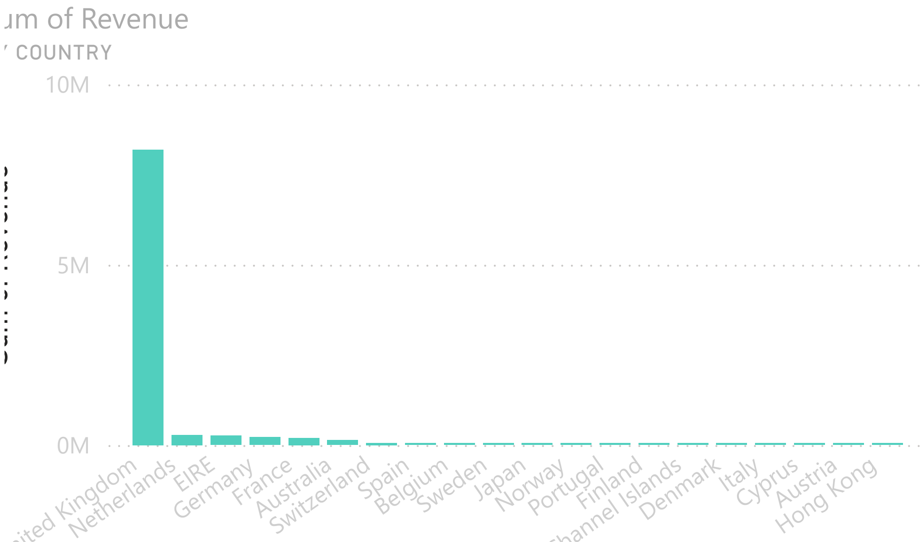
performing products to reduce revenue concentration risks due to their dependency on a limited product range.



Regional Revenue Distribution

The United Kingdom generates the largest share of total revenue, significantly outperforming all other countries. This indicates that the business has a strong customer base and market presence within the UK, which is not out of the ordinary, as the company is based in the UK. However, while this strong market position provides a stable revenue base, it also creates geographic concentration risk.

Recommendations:

The company should continue investing in customer retention and market expansion within the UK while exploring opportunities to grow sales in other high-potential countries. Diversifying revenue sources can reduce dependence on a single market and improve long-term stability, as well as reduce geographic concentration risks.
