Top 10 Products - Profitability

The top 10 products on the left generate a substantial portion of total revenue, indicating that consumer demand is concentrated around a relatively small number of products. Revenue is particularly concentrated amongst the three highest-performing products, suggesting dependence on a limited product range. These products represent the company's strongest revenue drivers and play a critical role in overall business performance.

Recommendation

The business should prioritise inventory management for the top ten best-selling and profitable products to avoid stock shortages. Marketing campaigns and promotions should focus on these items as they have already demonstrated being in high demand and are most likely to deliver the highest return on investment.

However, while the top three profitable products should remain a priority, the company should also explore opportunities to expand the success of mid-performing products to reduce revenue concentration risks due to their dependency on a limited product range.
